Question: The passage given below is followed by a set of questions. Choose the best answer to each question.

(Questions 22-26)

Human nature is one of those things that everybody talks about but no one can define precisely. Every time we fall in love, fight with our spouse, get upset about the influx of immigrants into our country, or go to church, we are, in part, behaving as a human animal with our own unique evolved nature-human nature. This means two things. First, our thoughts, feelings, and behaviour are produced not only by our individual experiences and environment in our own lifetime but also by what happened to our ancestors millions of years ago. Second, our thoughts, feelings, and behaviour are shared, to a large extent, by all men or women, despite seemingly large cultural differences. Human behaviour is a product both of our innate human nature and of our individual experience and environment.
